

A close-up, top-down view of a jeweler's hands working on a white table. The jeweler is wearing a light green long-sleeved shirt and is using a silver pen to sketch intricate jewelry designs on a white sheet of paper. The designs include necklaces, earrings, and rings. Various jewelry-making tools and finished pieces are scattered around the workspace, including a pair of pliers, a ring, a necklace, and several pairs of earrings. The background is softly blurred, focusing attention on the jeweler's hands and the designs.

Manufacturing Metals

Silver

Silver is a classic and popular choice for jewelry due to its numerous advantages. Among other characteristics, Silver has a bright, shiny appearance that complements a wide range of skin tones and outfits. Silver has a classic, timeless appeal that doesn't go out of style.

Brass

Brass is a popular material and one of our most favorite in jewelry. It has a warm, gold-like appearance that can mimic the look of gold without the high price tag. Among other characteristics, Brass can be easily molded and shaped, allowing for a wide range of intricate and detailed designs. Brass with aging can have a vintage look to it making it very appealing for many people.

Stainless Steel

Stainless steel is one of our most favorite materials to make jewelry. Stainless steel is highly resistant to scratches. It is also Hypoallergenic which means it is unlikely to cause allergies. Although it is strong and durable, it is also very affordable.
